Teaching Notes

1. The pages in this book are designed for direct instruction. The teacher should work directly with the students as the pages are completed. Do not assign pages to be done independently. The student must have the teacher's guidance on every page.
2. The overall sequence should be completed in order. However, it is up to the teacher, tutor, or parent to decide how many pages and which pages to do for each letter studied. I've provided some pages that are very easy and others that are more challenging.
3. Each new letter that is introduced has a small picture beside to show its sound. These pictures are from a Sound Story, available at www.soundcityreading.com. Each picture in the story represents a letter sound in our language. For example, the sound for a ticking clock is /t/, and the sound for a growling dog is /r/. Read some of the story each day until all of part 1 has been completed. Go over all of the pictures and letters that have been taught during each lesson and have the student say the sounds.
4. Handwriting materials are available from www.soundcityreading.com.
5. Have the student complete the beginning sound and ending sound pages under your supervision. You will need to help the student identify the picture if he doesn't recognize it. The picture names are at the bottom of each page, for teacher reference. The student should pronounce the word slowly, listen carefully for the beginning or ending sound in the word, and write the associated letter on the lines. Model and help as needed. Insist that the student write each letter correctly.
6. Beginning Sound Picture Cards and Ending Sound Picture Cards are available from www.soundcityreading.com. Cards for the selected letters can be used to practice sorting pictures by beginning or ending sounds on a pocket chart before doing the related worksheets.

Beginning sound pages for each letter include:

1) One introduction page on which all of the pictures begin with the same new letter sound;
2) One discrimination page on which pictures begin with the new letter sound or the letter taught just before the new sound;
3) One review page with pictures that begin with all of the previously taught letters.

If a letter commonly appears at the end of a word, ending sound pages are also included:

1) One introduction page on which all of the pictures end with the new letter;
2) One discrimination page on which pictures begin with the current letter and the ending letter taught just before it;
3) Another discrimination page on which pictures either begin or end with the new letter.

After each group of six letters are studied, these pages are included:

1) One ending sound review page;
2) One page on which both beginning and ending sounds are written;
3) One page on which a medial (middle) short vowel sound is written;
4) One page on which beginning, middle, and ending sounds are written.
